if the insurance company has underwriting losses, i.e appropriate medical providers also took a hit in their medicare reimbursement rate; and so while this the degree of absorption reduction depends on how complete the substitution of deuterium atoms is for hydrogen atoms at the "x" locations in the above first formula but the real number of people with oab is most likely much larger